

Version Control is a super important system that allows coders to save different versions of a code base. If things break or if previous function needs to be seen, previous versions are logged and can be restored. With the Prep 1-5 assignments, each program needed to be saved in their working state along with some text describing what was done. If I return to improve on my code I will 'git commit -m "...'" and will add text describing my changes.